Unfortunately, I don't know enough to speak to that directly. But I do know this: the ongoing trials with all of this garbage going on from every and all directions don't have a chance at being valid - even if they did or didn't start from a valid starting point.

Unfortunately for that statement, the issues of manipulation are correct but the drug also doesn't work. The flimsy P2 trials were cooked to get retail to invest before a P3. From study sites to trial design to issues with data, it's pretty clear.

"under the guise of science" valid criticisms have been brought up and not addressed at all. It's clear the entire preclinical suite of work related to PTI is fabricated. So how of they faked that work, does the drug do what they say?

Apexx, you're naive in the realm of clinical trials. If you had taken time to read this very long thread, instead of hyperventilate all over your keyboard, you'd see the fraud problem in CT's has been discussed. Here's an ex:

You have provided zero facts anywhere from what I've seen? Just regurgitated talking points from the discord. Which I need to tell you, isn't the summit of great minds you think it is Apexx will soon retreat back to the Discord therapy room, once he runs out of gas with regurgitated talking points. He has no interest in learning anything scientific. He just wants a GameStop type pop to pay off his trailer house. Am I wrong? Then engage the SCIENCE.

You missed the point, Einstein. No X-ray crystallography, competitive binding studies, computational modeling, fragment studies, etc. Zippo. Nada. Nothing. It's not like FLNA is a mystery... so why not study it properly with available tools?

A large part of this system relies on good faith research and conduct. When it's abused, it undermines the whole system, as we see with Sava.

The \$SAVA fan strawman is that critics claim Remi & Wang traveled to every site administering cog tests and fudging data. No. Indep labs can exclude subjects, etc w/out needing to log in a central server & SAVA has dropped N's in the biomarker and clinical data repeatedly Sponsors can access live data, Cantab and Axiom allow this and it's totally 21CFR11 compliant. But we live in Disneyland, where Magic Happens. The \$SAVA ADAS-Cog data is organic, and PTI-125 can reverse Alzheimer's symptoms in a few weeks.

I'd rather the FDA doesn't just allow a sponsor that has faked their preclinical and clinical data get away with actually progressing to the NDA submission phase, that is a privilege to hold for non-fraudulent sponsors. Of course this isn't what you want since you are long

It seems like you'll believe whatever you want at this point, so I won't try to convince otherwise. But I am not Adrian nor do I have a position in Sava. Good luck!

Clearly you do not. Or maybe you're just incapable of accurately interpreting the evidence. Which actually seems likely

I am defending my own interpretation of the data and science in question. The only logical conclusion any scientist familiar with such studies would make is fraud, as that is the only way to explain many of the observations. I see no long has even attempted to explain them either

Yes and their rebuttals lie even more about basic scientific concepts/experiments. Seemed like a deliberate attempt to mislead while doing damage control. Savas initial rebuttal is actually what clued me in to their fraud. Lies and obfuscation through and through

Another illustration of two Spinal Cord original blots, both with a very similar background, as highlighted with boxes of the same color.

I'm still wondering why we are developing a billion dollar drug on blots without 21st century lab methods. Prove altered FLNA exists beyond gels. \$SAVA
